cal citizens with a fierce desire to help their neighbors.

Emergency personnel crews including all local fire departments, West Liberty Police Department, Morgan County sheriff and jailer departments, Kentucky State Police, the Kentucky National Guard and several other agencies worked around the clock for several days to search for survivors, clear rubble and maintain order in the disaster area.

Local utility crews also worked frantically to restore electricity, telephone, water, sewer and gas services throughout the county with the assistance of volunteer brigades throughout Kentucky.

Judge Executive Tim Conley during a March 7 public meeting at Morgan County Middle School made a firm resolution to rebuild West Liberty and Morgan County.

"From the ashes we will rise," Conley said. "Brighter days are ahead. West Liberty won't look the same... But it might look even better than before."

Now, more than nine months after the tornado, Conley's words are coming to fruition as several local businesses have been re-built or re-opened in new locations.

The year's post-tornado highlights included an Aug. 18 visit from University of Kentucky Head Basketball Coach John Calipari, who – in conjunction with Kentucky Sports Radio – raised $60,849 for the local tornado relief effort.

The coach also raised an additional $110,000 for Morgan County's recovery during the annual UK alumni game on Sept. 15.

The re-opening of the venerable Freezer Fresh, which was destroyed by the tornado, was also cause for celebration.

"This means so much to our citizens and to many people in surrounding counties," Judge Conley said at the Sept. 13 grand opening. "We all love the food and remember the awesome times we had here. Today, an icon of our community has returned."

The judge executive noted last fall that citizens can also look forward to the erection of a wellness/youth recreation center, a downtown parking garage and a new extension service facility. Construction is expected to begin on these projects in late winter or early spring 2013.

In addition, Gov. Steve Beshear also announced a $7.2 million project to widen Main and Prestonsburg streets during a Nov. 1 visit to City Hall, where he where he presented Judge Conley and Mayor Jim Rupe a $400,000 check from the Transportation Cabinet's state road contingency fund to pay for the initial design work required to construct a turn lane beginning at the county government building on Prestonsburg Street that would run through Main Street to the Court Street intersection.

Various businesses and organizations – including Commercial Bank and the Methodist and Christian churches – along the route already plan to set their new buildings further back from the streets to accommodate the plan.

Leaders of the destroyed historical churches and other local religious institutions throughout the community continue to aid the recovery effort as they look to the future.

Commercial Bank officials announced last fall that they plan to demolish their current Main Street building – which sustained severe tornado damage – and clear the lot for the construction of a $5 million downtown facility in addition to their new Index Branch located in the former Dairy Cheer building.

The new Citizens Bank building is currently under construction on Prestonsburg Street, while repairs are made to Bank of the Mountains's downtown branch and drive-thru facility in addition to the construction of a new conference hall on Court Street.

Judge Conley said Morgan Countians can expect more success stories in the near future.

"There have been many ribbon cutting ceremonies in recent months," Conley said. "More celebrations and big announcements of great things for Morgan County are coming in the near future."

The first post-tornado edition of The Courier dated Thursday, March 8, 2012 – which included a banner headline that read "Thank God for sparing so many" – was cited by Judge Executive Tim Conley during a March 9 press conference as an example of the community's resolve to rebuild.

"LVC Publisher Earl Kinner lost his office and his home to the tornado," Conley said, holding a copy of the newspaper. "Despite that, he and his staff worked hard to get out their paper. Here it is... Only one day late, amazingly. Morgan Countians might get knocked down, but we don't give up."

News Editor Miranda Cantrell said the staff looks forward to covering West Liberty's revival.

Six-year-old boy dies in Rowan County fire

A six-year-old boy died in a Dec. 21 housefire in the Rowan County community of Clearfield.

Authorities said Edward Dale Pennington was found in a hallway of the home, located off Early Lane on Clearfield Hill, approximately two hours after the fire started.

The boy's father reportedly escaped from the house and re-entered the burning structure in an attempt to save his son.

The parents and two of their three remaining daughters were transported to St. Claire Regional Medical Center, then to the UK Medical Center.

One of the daughters, age 7, was moved to the pediatric burn unit at the Shriners' Hospital for Children in Cincinnati. A hospital spokesperson said she was in critical condition after being transferred from St. Claire.

The cause of the fire remains undetermined at this time.

A PRAYER FOR OUR NATION

DEAR GOD

We stand before you today, lifting up to you our nation that is being torn from your direction by the forces of Satan, suffering of every kind,

Every day a new story of anguish and dysfunction, families broken, children with no parents, which they so desperately need, death by devastating diseases brought on by an immoral life style.

Countless thousands trapped in poverty, alone and without hope, a nation ruled by so many leaders whose every intent is greed, love of money, and love of power rather than the good of this country and the very people who elected them to office.

We are a nation being pulled away from the Bible-driven purpose on which our founding fathers built this wonderful society. They came with the Bible in hand and burning desire to be able to live in a land of the free and brave, free to worship you, free to open every function with a prayer whether it was an official function, a school function or something basic as an offering of thanks for each and every meal.

Our founding fathers worked hard... they worshiped you hard they fought for freedom in everything they did. As founding fathers they recognized you as the creator, the sustainer and the giver of all good things. They inscribed our money with "IN GOD WE TRUST". This the forces of SATAN are attacking. Lord we need your help in turning the thoughts and actions of the American people back to you and your teachings, bless our leaders with wisdom and courage to turn to you... Lord forgive me for my indifference, give me an unshakeable burden to pray for our nation, to pray for defeat of every cause or group that is contrary to your teachings.

May I ever cast my ballot for the candidate who is supporting the ethics of a Christian faith... Dear God give me courage to stand in opposition to anything contrary to the principles contained in your word, The Holy Bible. Help me to remember that I am without excuse if I don't make a difference, if I don't raise my voice in protest, if I don't fight anything eroding Christian values, if I don't make every effort to turn our nation back to you. Dear God may I live in a manner which glorifies Christ and reflects the love of Jesus to the world, in Jesus name AMEN.

This prayer was prayed by the congregation at the Hartselle Church of Christ; it was lead by Bob Smith, Elder

Coal poised to beat oil as top world energy source

But U.S. demand and production will drop, monitoring agency says

Demand for coal will increase in every world region except the U.S. through 2017, according to the Paris-based International Energy Agency. The trend is attributed to cheap natural gas providing stiff competition to coal in the U.S.

The "Medium-Term Coal Market Report" says coal will come close to surpassing oil as the world's top energy source within the next five years, with developing countries burning about 1.2 billion more metric tons of coal per year by 2017.

The report says coal demand will drop in the U.S. by 97 million metric tons of coal equivalent by 2017, and that production will be down 20 percent, to 771 MTCE from the current 967.

Predictions about coal's decline in the U.S. "conform with numerous other forecasts of coal use and production," Manuel Quinones of Energy & Environment News reports. The report says cheap gas, retirement of coal-fired power plants and environmental regulation are the leading factors in coal's U.S. decline.

AEP to stop burning coal at its Louisa power plant

Kentucky Power Co. announced last week that it will effectively close its Big Sandy Power Plant in Louisa, Ky., after scratching plans to install a $1 billion scrubber to comply with environmental standards, reports Ralph Davis of the Floyd County Times in Prestonsburg.

The power produced by the plant will be replaced by a sister plant in Moundsville, W.Va. If this plan is approved, it will increase electric rates by 8 percent. The closure of a similar plant almost anywhere else in the U.S. would be expected. But in the heart of Central Appalachian coal country, the move speaks volumes.

Under a federal-court consent decree, the company must bring the Big Sandy plant into compliance with the Clean Air Act, or close it, by 2015. If the company had installed the scrubber, electric bills would have increased by 31 percent, Davis notes. As the Kentucky

Public Service Commission was deciding whether to approve that plan, Kentucky Power withdrew it, saying it wanted to "reevaluate alternatives due to changes in the energy market," Davis writes.

Under the new plan, Kentucky Power would obtain 50 percent of the Mitchell Generation Station in Moundsville, which like it is owned by American Electric Power.

Kentucky Power's announcement doesn't address what will happen to the Big Sandy plant, but a separate statement released by the company says it is still trying to decide the plant's fate. The company said plans could come next year when it submits a filing to cover future generating capacity at Big Sandy, Davis writes.

Some options for the plant include converting it to natural gas, which could be used for generation at times of peak demand. Regardless, the generator will "cease burning coal, as plans to retire it as a coal-fired generator in 2015 are already in place," Davis writes.

Employees at the plant will have an opportunity to get other jobs in the AEP system, and those who aren't hired elsewhere will be offered severance packages.

"The closure will also have a negative ripple effect in the coal industry," Davis writes. The Big Sandy plant consumes about 2 million tons of coal a year, but after 2015, it will consume no coal, perhaps putting some coal jobs in the region in jeopardy.

Feds say all or nothing on Medicaid expansion

By Al Cross
Kentucky Health News

Dec. 19 — When the Supreme Court upheld federal health reform but said states could opt out of the expansion of Medicaid to people with incomes above the poverty line, to be funded with generous federal subsidies, one of the first questions was whether a state had to go all the way: to 133 percent of poverty (138 percent with an official fudge factor). Now the Obama administration has answered "no." And that could make the decision tougher for Kentucky, which is the only state The Washington Post listed this month as leaning toward expansion.

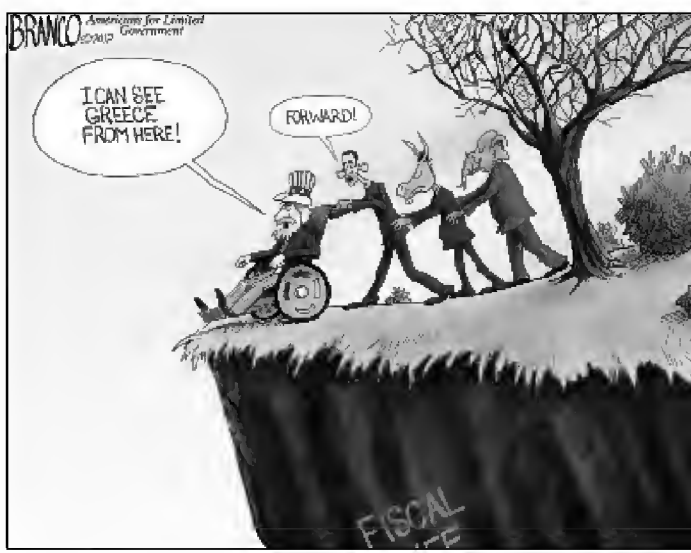

The Post's Sarah Kliff wrote, "The administration's reasoning goes like this: The federal government was giving states a really, really good deal on the Medicaid expansion. It was footing the entire bill for the newly eligible enrollees for three years," 2014 through 2016, rather than the 72 percent it pays Kentucky for current enrollees. The subsidy for the new eligibles would drop to 95 percent in 2017, 94 percent in 2018, 93 percent in 2019; and 90 percent in 2020.

White House aides told Kliff that in passing the bill,

Congress (which is to say the Democrats in Congress) "gave states that really high funding in the service of a very specific goal: Ensuring all Americans have access to insurance options." But "If a state decided to cover, say, everyone up to the federal poverty line, they would be working with a smaller, more manageable population," Kliff explains. "Those living above the poverty line, meanwhile, wouldn't be left in the lurch. The Affordable Care Act allows them to receive very generous subsidies in the private insurance market."

However, Medicaid Administrator Cindy Mann told Kliff that if states could fall short of the 133 percent level, they wouldn't be within the spirit of the law. Kliff paraphrases Mann: "They wouldn't offer all their residents a way to purchase affordable coverage, and if they're not going to do that, the White House says they don't deserve the extra funding."

Gov. Steve Beshear said again today that Kentucky should expand Medicaid "if we can afford it" because so many people in the state have no health insurance and are in poor health, and improving their health would be good for the state's economy.

Kentucky now makes Medicaid available to people with household incomes below 70 percent of the poverty line, which varies by household size. The Urban Institute has estimated that expanding the program to 133 percent of poverty would cost the state about 5 percent more than it would otherwise spend through 2022. That would be $1.3 billion extra in 2017-22, and some Republicans in the legislature have said the state can't afford it. The state expects to spend $1.5 billion on Medicaid in the 2013-14 fiscal year.

While the Post lists Kentucky as the only state "leaning yes" to expansion, it seems likely to be joined by several others. "States have stayed mum on whether they will participate in the expansion, seeing first if they could get a better deal — the partial expansion," Kliff writes. "The federal government took a while to show its cards; it wanted to see if states would sign up for the full expansion, without giving them a scaled-back option." Only 17 states have said yes, and as many are undecided, the Post reports.

In setting a firm rule, the White House may think states "will decide the 100 percent match is too good to pass up and that the federal money will pull everyone in," Kliff writes. "Or, it could indicate the Obama administration is okay with not all states participating with the Medicaid expansion on day one. Again, this wouldn't be unprecedented: Only six states initially signed up for Medicaid when it launched in 1965."

States should realize that expanding Medicaid is a long-term investment in the health of their people that will pay off in the long run, Dr. Wayne Myers, who once ran Kentucky's rural-health office and was the first director of the federal Office of Rural Health Policy, writes in the Daily Yonder. He says that if a state doesn't expand Medicaid, many of its people will remain or become uninsured.

"Medicaid is a rural issue because a higher percentage of low-income people live in rural communities, and rural families are less likely to have private health insurance," Myers writes, adding that the program is also "a major economic driver." According to the National Center for Rural Health Works at Oklahoma State University, Medicaid was responsible for 113,000 jobs and a total of $10.5 billion in economic activity in Oklahoma in 2010.

Myers cites studies showing that patients with insurance who are hospitalized after accidents are 40 percent less likely to die than those without insurance, because uninsured patients got less attention from medical staff. Opting out of the expansion "may get a governor a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the foot, some dead hospitals and a bunch of dead citizens who needn't have died," Myers writes.

A Miracle of Love For 2012

The devotional for December 17, 2012, was the following, "Seek joy in what you give, not in what you get". Within two hours after reading it, it became very real to me, so this is a story I want to share this Christmas Season.

I have been collecting teddy bears for more than 30 years to the extent that they are overflowing my house. So after reading the article by Judge Conley last week, it became apparent that I should donate them to the Christmas Drive for children of the tornado victims.

But how does one get in touch with a judge who is so busy with more important things than a collection of teddy bears. But these teddy bears are very special in that each one was carefully chosen from many parts of the U.S. and Canada and given a name.

My love for bears started when I was a first grader. My teacher was Mr. Raymond Davis, and just as loving as any teddy bear could be. So with his chubby fingers and his broad smile, he lovingly pointed out the words of the story of Goldilocks and the Three Bears to a group of first graders. I not only fell in love with bears, but I also fell in love with my teacher. He never knew the truth was that I had memorized the entire book. As he pointed out each word with a chubby finger I would hold on to that finger. This was my beginning love affair for both—bears and my teacher.

This past Monday morning after failing to reach the judge by phone, I called The Courier Office and spoke with Janie about my dilemma and within an hour a call came to my home asking for directions to my address here in Lexington. Before I had time to put 50 some bears into bags, Jackie Howell was pulling his truck into my driveway. yes, this is 333 Cromwell Way and yes, there is a green bench in front of the garage. All these things I had told him, within such a short time, was had to believe.

made of a woman, made under the law, To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons. All the prophecies of a saviour was fulfilled through Jesus Christ thus the fullness of time had come.

Every birth has changed the course of history and our lives. Suppose you have never been born, how would it effect all the lives around you? Or say your spouse was never born, how would that change your life? Think of everyone that was ever born, whose life would effect you the most if they had never been born. There has never been anyone like Jesus Christ that has changed history and lives like he has. Even time and our calendars are based around his birth.

Jesus didn't come to condemn the world, but the world through him might be saved. Some may think of God as someone who wants to punish us but that is so far from the truth. John 10:10 The thief cometh not, but to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. Because Jesus came into the world he can change your life. Colossians 2:10 And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power. Jesus can make you the person that God intended you to be. Scripture said "unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given"; have you accepted him into your life yet? Come worship with us, we preach about things like this.

IN MEMORIAM

In Memory of Loving Husband, Father, & Papaw Milla Dean Gibson who passed away Dec. 27, 2011

One sad and lonely year is to pass since the night God called you home. The shock still lingers in my heart, for I miss you more each day.

When evening shadows are falling and I sit at home alone, in my heart there comes a longing that you could once more come home.

You ask me how I can be content here to stay just sitting by an empty chair each evening of the day.

It's hard for you to understand, but to one alone like me, his chair is never empty for it's filled with memory.

At times he seems to come again and rest here by my side. I sit and hold his loving hand as when I was his bride. And then he safely slips away and then it's when I feel alone. I miss his gentle touch, footsteps and his sweet voice tone.

Someday when he is leaving I think I'll slip away and leave behind two empty chairs and go with him to stay.

Your Social Security

It's very likely that during the holiday season you've been spending a bit of time and money getting gifts for everyone on your shopping list. Why not take a moment and give yourself a holiday gift? We have a suggestion, and while it won't cost you a penny, it could be one of the best (and easiest) financial steps you ever take for your future.

Give yourself the gift of your own Social Security Statement. You can get yours online at www.socialsecurity.gov/mystatement.

The online Social Security Statement is simple, easy to use, and provides estimates you can use to plan for your retirement. It also provides estimates for disability and survivors benefits, making the Statement an important financial planning tool.

Your Statement also allows you to determine whether your earnings are accurately posted to your Social Security records. This feature is important because Social Security benefits are based on average earnings over your lifetime.

To get a personalized online Statement, you must be age 18 or older and must be able to provide information about yourself that matches information already on file with Social Security. In addition, Social Security uses Experian, an external authentication service provider, for further verification. You must provide identifying information and answer security questions in order to pass this verification. Social Security will not share your Social Security number with Experian, but the identity check is an important part of this new, thorough verification process.

When your identity is verified, you can create a "My Social Security" account with a unique user name and password to access your online Statement. In addition, your online Statement includes links to information about other online Social Security services, such as applications for retirement, disability, and Medicare.

This holiday season, it's likely you'll be hearing some of your friends and family saying "you shouldn't have" as they receive their gifts from you. That's something to look forward to. But be sure that you don't find yourself saying "I should have" when it comes to planning your own financial future. Get your online Social Security Statement and look it over. Do it again next year. It may be the best gift you can give to yourself in the long run.

Your free gift is waiting at www.socialsecurity.gov/mystatement.

Employers warned of misleading labor law poster 'notices'

FRANKFORT, Ky. Dec. 12 — Attorney General Jack Conway today cautioned Kentucky employers to be on the lookout for misleading labor law notices sold by private companies. Letters sent to Kentucky businesses threaten civil and criminal penalties ranging from $7,000 to $17,000 if they do not display certain posters being sold.

"Some employers are misled into believing that these notices are official government warnings," General Conway said. "While certain posters are required by law to be posted in the workplace, the Kentucky Department of Labor, as well as other state agencies and the U.S. Department of Labor, provides these posters free of charge. I want to make sure that employers don't fall victim to these fraudulent posters and scare tactics."

Some Kentucky businesses have reported receiving threatening "second" and "final notices" from private entities selling labor law posters, which they claim are required under Kentucky and federal law. The Kentucky Department of Labor does not mail notices advising businesses of these requirements. Businesses are advised to contact the Kentucky Department of Labor and U.S. Department of Labor to learn what workplace posters are required.

For more information about Kentucky and U.S. labor laws, contact the following agencies:

Kentucky Department of Labor www.labor.ky.gov or contact Mike Donta at mikedonta@ky.gov or 502-564-3070.

U.S. Department of Labor www.dol.gov/osbp/sbrefa/poster/matrix.htm or e-mail: Contact-OSBP@dol.gov or call 1-888-9-SBREFA.

If employers have any questions about whether they are required to display posters in their workplace, they should contact the appropriate government agency.

MEDICAL Moment

How Much Sleep Is Enough?

Do you wake up each morning on your own without an alarm clock feeling refreshed, alert and ready for the day ahead? Or do you drag yourself out of bed, grumbling to yourself until you get your first cup of coffee?

Most Americans, unfortunately, fall into the latter category. And the situation is getting worse. One study based on sleep records of full-time workers found a significant increase in the number of persons getting less than six hours of sleep a night during the period from 1975 to 2006.

That's true even though most Americans know that sleep plays an important role in good health and even longevity. Persons who average 6.5 to 7.5 hours of sleep a night (according to self reports) live longer than those who sleep less and even those who sleep more.

The effect of short sleep is easy to understand. Even over a one- to two-day period, subjects limited to four hours of sleep show increased heart rate and blood pressure and markers of inflammation such as c-reactive protein (CRP)—all risk factors for heart disease. This kind of sleep deprivation is also associated with impaired glucose tolerance, leading to increased hunger/appetite, obesity and type 2 diabetes. Cindy Crager, APRN

Up to this point, studies have not found similar negative physical changes associated with long sleep duration, although observational studies indicate that long sleepers have an increased risk of illness, accidents, depression and death.

Some researchers believe that many persons who habitually sleep 9 or 10 hours a night might have depression or a physical illness that accounts for their longer sleeping and greater risk of early death.

How much sleep do we really need? For adults, experts agree that there is a great deal of individual variation. Some individuals go through most of their lives getting less than five hours sleep a night while others seem to require 9 to 10 or more.

When you were in college and "pulled all nighters" to study for exams, you probably assumed your mind and body would adjust—that you could catch up on lost sleep over the weekend. Studies over the last decade indicate that this was probably not the case.

In a study published in 2003, researchers assigned subjects to groups sleeping four, six or eight hours for two week periods in the sleep laboratory. Every two hours during the day, the subjects were given a psychomotor vigilance test, measuring the kind of sustained attention and focus that are needed for tasks such as driving, careful reading of an exam question or working a math problem.

Over the study period, subjects getting eight hours of sleep had no lapses of attention or cognitive impairment, but those in both of the other groups showed steady declines with each passing day. By the end of two weeks, those sleeping six hours a night had cognitive impairments similar to subjects in another study deprived of sleep for 24 hours straight.

At first, the sleep deprived subjects realized that they were not at their best, but as time went on, they insisted that sleepiness was no longer affecting their performance—even though it clearly was.

How about increasing sleep time? One study asked students to "sleep as much as possible" over several weeks. During the first week, the subjects' average sleep time increased from 7.5 to 9-9.9 hours a night, and these increased sleep times were associated with better alertness and less daytime sleepiness.

Over the next several weeks, however, the students' sleep time gradually came back down to an average of about 8.5 hours a night. The researchers theorized that the subjects probably made up for previous sleep deprivation, then reached their maximum sleep level during the following weeks.

Researchers continue to study the interaction between 1) basal sleep need and 2) sleep debt. The first refers to the sleep needed on a regular basis—seven to eight hours for most persons. Sleep debt occurs when you fail to meet that basal need because of sickness, stress, poor sleep habits or simply a busy schedule.

Sleep debts can be paid off, although one or two nights of sleeping in over the weekend is usually not enough to get us back to optimal alertness.

When pressed by a busy schedule, it's tempting to sacrifice an hour or two of sleep—sometimes on a regular basis—in order to get things done. Unless you're doing something that requires little thought, that may not be a smart idea. As one researcher put it, you may be "trading time awake at the expense of performance."

Make your New Year's celebration sparkle safely

FLORENCE, Ala., Dec. 12 — "As we ring in 2013 with fireworks and sparklers, it's important to keep safety top of mind," says Sherri Fallin, spokesperson for TNT Fireworks East.

Americans use more than six times the amount of fireworks now than they did less than 40 years ago. In that same time period, fireworks-related injuries in the United States have plummeted, according to the U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission.

"The following tips from the American Pyrotechnics Association can help us all illuminate the New Year's holiday while protecting the safety of our friends, family and pets," Fallin says.

• TAKE PRECAUTIONS. Always keep a hose and a bucket of water nearby in case of emergencies.

• LIGHT ONE AT A TIME. NEVER light two or more fireworks or sparklers at the same time.

• KEEP IT OUTSIDE. Only use fireworks and sparklers outdoors on flat, hard surfaces in clear areas and away from houses, buildings and dry grass.

• HAVE ADULT SUPERVISION. NEVER allow young children to light or handle fireworks or sparklers. Be aware of the minimum permitted age in your state. Adults should always be present when lighting or handling fireworks or sparklers.

• STAY ALERT. NEVER mix alcohol or other substances with fireworks or sparklers.

• STAY CLEAR. NEVER hold a lit firework in your hand.

Keep as far from them as possible when lighting.

• LET SLEEPING FIREWORKS LIE. NEVER try to relight fireworks or sparklers that do not ignite. Wait 15 to 20 minutes before approaching them, then soak them with water and throw them away.

• PROTECT YOUR PETS. Animals are often frightened by the sounds of fireworks. Protect your "best friends" by keeping them indoors, secure and away from the loud, sudden noises.

Always check local and state laws to identify which products are legal, and only purchase those permitted by law. Also, check the label and instructions on fireworks and sparklers to ensure they come from a reliable, legal and licensed source.

For more information or to speak with Sherri Fallin, spokesperson for TNT Fireworks East, please contact Brette Bennett at (404) 446-1667.

I LIKE THE PROMISE

Christ is calling all His children, "come and be blessed. Though ye are heavy laden, I'll give you rest." Lean on His promise, brother, you'll find it's true. I like the one that says "I'm coming for you." I like the promise that He gave when He left. Though He's the rock and I can hide in the cleft, though He will pilot us so safely on through, I like the promise that says "I'm coming for you?" Many are the sainted loved ones gone on before. Loved ones who left us now await on that shore. Sometimes their leave has left us lovely and blue, 'til Jesus whispers, "I'm coming for you."

HE HIDETH MY SOUL

A wonderful Saviour is Jesus my Lord, a wonderful Saviour to me, He hideth my soul in the cleft of the rock that shadows a dry, thirsty land, He hideth my life in the depths of His love and covers me there with His hand a wonderful Saviour is Jesus my Lord. He taketh my burdens away. He holdeth me up and I shall not be moved. I shall not be moved. He giveth me strength as my day, with numberless blessings each moment. He crowns and filled with His fullness divine, I sing in my rapture, oh glory to God for such a redeemer as mine. When clothed in His brightness, transported I rise to meet Him in clouds of the sky. His perfect salvation. His wonderful love, I'll shout with the millions on high.

WISPER OF WINTER

There's a wisper of winter this November day while tiny, white snow flakes now fall on our way. Clouds high up above are wearing a frown and autumn is dressed in a frosty, white gown. There is a wisper of winter in sharp winds that blow and stars in the Heavens are now hanging low. Little creatures now wcurry to find warmth and cheer. They know without question that winter is near. The earth now is frozen, the garden asleep. The season of autumn a promise to keep. There's a smile bright and golden from last rays of sun while a wisper of winter lends moments of fun.

NRA responds to school murders in Connecticut

Recommends federal program to put armed guards in every school

Dec. 21 — The chief executive of the National Rifle Association said today that Congress should immediately fund trained, armed security guards "in every single school" to prevent mass shootings like the one in Newtown, Conn., "before any lengthy debate on legislation" and another "unspeakable crime."

"The only thing that stops a bad guy with a gun is a good guy with a gun," NRA Executive Vice President Wayne LaPierre said at a press conference interrupted twice by protesters with banners. He did not provide a cost estimate or take questions, instead introducing former U.S. Rep. Asa Hutchinson of Arkansas, who will lead an NRA-funded effort to create a model school-safety program. Hutchinson also did not take questions, but said local schools should be free to turn down the proposed federal funding for armed guards.

LaPierre criticized news organizations on several fronts, in effect casting them as the NRA's chief opponents on gun-control issues, rather than advocacy groups and members of Congress. He said "media conglomerates" that produce violent movies and video games are "silent enablers . . . if not complicit co-conspirators" with those whom the games and films inspire to violence.

Country Winter

When winter arrives in the country, nature snuggles in quiet repose.

Fields lie dormant 'neath a blanket of snow where corn stubble withers in patterned rows.

Corncribs bulge with the harvest, the barn loft is crammed with hay, livestock huddle close near the feedlot seeking warmth on a cold wintry day.

The pungent aroma of wood smoke permeates the frost-chilled air, snow-tingled branches of the barren trees reach toward heaven--as if in prayer.

Cold blustery winds buffet the land, snowdrifts linger along the fence, a hearty stew simmers on the cook stove... food for the soul--as recompense.

Big Finish

Big trees also provide food supplies to numerous animal species, and store large amounts of carbon, recycle soil nutrients and contribute to the flow of water and climate within an ecosystem, Robbins reports. "It is a very, very disturbing trend," James Cook University professor and co-author Bill Laurance said. "We are talking about the loss of the biggest living organisms that play a key role in regulating and enriching our world."

Books of the Bible hidden in this text

There are 30 books of the Bible in this paragraph. Can you find them? This is a most remarkable puzzle. It was found by a gentleman in an airplane seat pocket, on a flight from Los Angeles to Honolulu, keeping him occupied for hours. He enjoyed it so much he passed it on to some friends. One friend from Illinois worked on this while fishing from his john boat. Another friend studied it while playing on his banjo. Elaine Taylor, a columnist friend, was so intrigued by it she mentioned it in her weekly newspaper column. Another friend judges their job of solving this puzzle so involving, she brews a cup of tea to help her nerves. There will be some names that are really easy to spot. That's a fact. Some people, however, will soon find themselves in a jam, especially since the book names are not necessarily capitalized. Truthfully, from answers we get, we are forced to admit it usually takes a minister or a scholar to see some of them at the worst. Research has shown that something in our genes is responsible for the difficulty we have in seeing the books in this paragraph. During a recent fund raising event, which featured this puzzle, the Alpha Delta Phi lemonade booth set a new record. The local paper, The Chronicle surveyed over 200 patrons who reported that this puzzle was one of the most difficult they had ever seen. As Daniel Humana humbly puts it, "The books are all right here in plain view hidden from sight." Those able to find all of them will hear great lamentations from those who have to be shown. One revelation that may help is that books like Timothy and Samuel may occur without their numbers. Also, keep in mind, that punctuation and spaces in the middle are normal. A chipper attitude will help you compete really well against those who claim to know the answers. Remember, there is no need for a mad exodus, there really are 30 books of the Bible lurking somewhere in this paragraph waiting to be found.

2012 was record year for Ky.'s deer, bear harvests

FRANKFORT, Ky. - It was a year for deer and bear season records.

Here's a look back at a few of the top stories from 2012:

Kentucky hunters harvested a record number of white-tailed deer.

With 35 days of archery hunting and a two-day youth season remaining before season's end, hunters eclipsed the overall deer harvest total record. As of Dec. 18, hunters harvested 126,923 deer. This total breaks the previous season record of 124,752 set in 2004.

Earlier in the fall, hunters reported bagging 92,737 whitetails during Kentucky's modern gun season which ended Monday, Nov. 25. Last spring, a record 68 deer from the 2011-12 season in Kentucky qualified for entry into the Boone and Crockett record book, the most for any state or Canadian province.

"These records demonstrate that we have a stable, quality deer herd," said Tina Brunjes, deer program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "But what drives the harvest is good hunting weather, particularly during the modern gun season, when the majority of our deer are taken."

Bear season in Kentucky has come of age.

Kentucky's 2012 bear season was the first time hunters reached the harvest quota and in the process set a new state record.

Doug Adkins of Jenkins, Ky. took a 410-pound male bear in Letcher County. "That's the field-dressed weight," said Steve Dobey, bear program coordinator for Kentucky Fish and Wildlife. "The live weight would have likely exceeded 450 pounds."

Hunters purchased 359 permits for the 2012 hunt. Nine of the 11 bears taken were males.

By the late 2000s, black bears had made a comeback and were well established in eastern Kentucky. The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources says these bears did not come to Kentucky by a planned restoration effort, but by natural range expansion. Bears again colonized eastern Kentucky's mountain region from the neighboring states of West Virginia, Virginia and Tennessee, where bear populations were never extirpated.

YOU MUST NOT QUIT

When things go wrong as they sometimes will when the road you're trudging seems all up hill, when the funds are low and debts are high and you want to smile but you have to sigh, when care is pressing you down a bit, rest if you must, but don't you quit. Life is strange with it's twists and turns as everyone of us sometimes learns, and many a failure turns about when he might have won had he stuck it out. Don't give up though the pace seems slow you may succeed with another blow. Success is failure turned inside out, the silver tint of the clouds of doubt, and you never can tell just how close you are, it may be near when it seems so far, so stick to the fight when you're hardest hit, when things seems worst, you must not quit.

THESE PRAYERS WE OFFER

Dear God, Where there is darkness we pray there will be light, where ever there's justice may justice be in sight, where there is great oppression, may freedom soon be near. We pray for understanding and to the end of fear where there is utter hopelessness, may hope be born anew. May we show more compassion as you would have us do. Where is strife and hatred may there be peace and love. These prayers we humbly offer dear God above.

When you are angry, count to ten, the bad feelings will diminish. When you are happy, count until you tire, the pleasure will be prolonged.
